Immigration on Public's Mind

Issue ranks with economy as a top concern of Americans

WASHINGTON | Americans are now about as likely to mention immigration as the economy when they are asked to name the most important problem facing the United States, though both rank behind war in Iraq and elsewhere, an AP-Ipsos poll found.

Immigration's rise in the latest survey about the nation's top problems suggests the public is keeping close watch on the immigration debate by U.S. lawmakers.

Efforts in the Senate to pass sweeping immigration legislation faltered Friday, leaving in doubt the prospects for passage of a measure that offered the hope of citizenship to millions of men, women and children living in the U.S. illegally. In response, an estimated 100,000 people are expected to turn out for a rally on the National Mall on Monday.

The rise in public concern about immigration has been quick and substantial.

When people were asked this past week to name the top national problem that came to mind, 13 percent said immigration — four times the number who said that in January. Roughly the same number, 14 percent, named the economy, according to the poll of 500 adults. The survey has a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 4.5 percentage points.

More than 11 million illegal immigrants are believed to be in the U.S. now, with thousands more coming in all the time. (AP)

'Joey' Producers Rushing To Place Votes

Aric McKeown must be a glutton for punishment. For the past few weeks, the New Hope, Minn., man has allowed people to vote on his Web site to determine which TV programs he'll watch Monday through Friday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. McKeown has received about 100 votes per time slot on his Web site — Makemewatchtv.com — resulting in his viewing of "Gilmore Girls," "House," "Veronica Mars," "Supernanny," "America's Funniest Home Videos" and "MASH." McKeown admitted that some shows are difficult to watch. (AP)

It's NOT a Sign From God

Regardless of how he had signed documents, from bank records to income tax returns, a judge rejected a Reading, Pa., man's request to be allowed to legally sign his driver's license as

"God." Judge Forrest G. Schaeffer ruled Thursday that the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation could require the man to sign his given name, Paul S. Sewell, and said documents he had signed in the past didn't prove differently. "The so-called name you want to apply is rather a series of scribbled marks," Schaeffer said. (AP)

Government lawyers tried to confiscate the gold tooth caps known as "grills" from the mouths of two Tacoma, Wash., men facing drug charges, saying the dental work was a seizable asset. The feds had the suspects in a vehicle headed to a dental clinic by the time defense lawyers persuaded a judge to halt the procedure. Immigration Rallies Draw Thousands

Demonstrators urge reforms to legalize undocumented workers

DALLAS | Hundreds of thousands of protesters banged drums, waived U.S. flags and shouted "Si Se Puede!", Spanish for "Yes, we can!", in a rally urging federal lawmakers to pass immigration reform that would legalize an estimated 11 million undocumented workers.

More protests are expected across America on Monday. Weeks ago, organizers picked Monday for dozens of demonstrations, a signal that what began as a string of disparate events — attracting tens and even hundreds of thousands of people — has become more coordinated.

Many of those who crammed into the streets of downtown Dallas on Sunday wore white clothing to symbolize peace. Marchers included families pushing strollers with their children. Police estimated the crowd at between 350,000 and 500,000.

Some protesters wore shirts that said "No HR 4437," referring to the House bill passed in December that would build more walls along the U.S.-Mexico border, make criminals of people who helped undocumented immigrants and make it a felony, rather than a civil infraction, to be in the country illegally.

The protest, one of many planned Sunday and Monday across the nation, was held even though sweeping reform legislation that would have given many illegal immigrants a chance at citizenship stalled on Capitol Hill last week.

In Des Moines, Iowa, more than 5,000 people rallied on Sunday. People in the mostly Hispanic crowd displayed American flags and carried signs that read "We are workers, not felons" and "Somos todos inmigrantes — We are all immigrants."

Trial to Start in Xbox Killing Case

ORLANDO, FLA. | Jury selection is set for Monday for three of the four men charged with the beating deaths of six youths who prosecutors said were beaten to death with aluminum bats over an Xbox video game system.

Prosecutors allege Troy Victorino, 29, Robert Cannon and Michael Salas, both 20, and Jerone Hunter, 19, organized the attack to retrieve an Xbox video game system that Victorino lost when he was kicked out of a different house in Deltona.

Salas, Victorino and Hunter are charged with six counts of murder and eight other felonies. Cannon already has pleaded guilty and will receive life in prison in exchange for his testimony. Prosecutors said they will seek the death penalty for the remaining defendants.

Wis. Man Accused of Tagging Jail Cell

MILWAUKEE | A man who faces sentencing on graffiti violations now faces another accusation — that he tagged his jail cells, too.

Troy Lee Mosby placed his signature "Syrup" tag on the walls, beds, tables, locker and mirrors of six cell blocks at the Milwaukee County House of Correction.

Mosby, 20, of Wauwatosa, was scheduled for sentencing Friday on 14 misdemeanor graffiti counts. Instead, Milwaukee County Circuit Court Judge Paul Van Grunsven adjourned the matter to April 21 so Mosby has time to answer the new accusation.

"Given the nature (of the new case) I don't think there will be a lot of investigation needed," he said.

Assistant District Attorney Nancy Ettenheim charged Mosby with habitual criminality, a felony. Mosby pleaded not guilty. (AP)

U.S. Softens Tone on Iran

White House seeks to dampen talk of strike over nuclear program

WASHINGTON | The White House on Sunday sought to dampen the idea of a U.S. military strike on Iran, saying the United States is conducting "normal defense and intelligence planning" as President Bush seeks a diplomatic solution to Tehran's suspected nuclear weapons program.

Administration officials — from President Bush on down — have left open the possibility of a military response if Iran does not end its nuclear ambitions. Several reports published Sunday said the administration was studying options for military strikes; one account raised the possibility of using nuclear bombs against Iran's underground nuclear sites.

Dan Bartlett, counselor to Bush, cautioned against reading too much into administration planning.

"The president's priority is to find a diplomatic solution to a problem the entire world recognizes," Bartlett told The Associated Press on Sunday. "And those who are drawing broad, definitive conclusions based on normal defense and intelligence planning, are ill-informed and are not knowledgeable of the administration's thinking on Iran."

Experts say a military strike on Iran would be risky. U.S. forces already are preoccupied with Iraq and Afghanistan, and an attack against Iran could inflame U.S. problems in the Muslim world.

British Foreign Secretary Jack Straw, in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp., said Britain would not launch a pre-emptive strike on Iran and he was as "certain as he could be" that neither would the U.S. NEDRA PICKLER (AP)

State police haven't made any arrests and said they have no evidence the shooting stemmed from a gang rivalry. (AP)

Bush Under Fire For Role in CIA Leak

Specter: White House needs to explain CIA intelligence disclosure

WASHINGTON | President Bush and Vice President Dick Cheney should speak publicly about their involvement in the CIA leak case, a leading Republican senator said Sunday.

"We ought to get to the bottom of it so it can be evaluated, again, by the American people," said Sen. Arlen Specter, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

In a federal court filing last week, the prosecutor in the case said Cheney's former chief of staff, I. Lewis Libby, testified before a grand jury that he was authorized by Bush, through Cheney, to leak information from a classified document that detailed intelligence agencies' conclusions about weapons of mass destruction in Iraq.

A lawyer knowledgeable about the case said Saturday that Bush declassified sensitive intelligence in 2003 and authorized its public disclosure to rebut Iraq war critics, but he did not specifically direct that Libby disseminate the information.

"I think that it is necessary for the president and vice president to tell the American people exactly what happened," Specter told "Fox News Sunday."

Libby faces trial on charges of perjury and obstruction of justice for allegedly lying to the grand jury and investigators about what he told reporters about CIA officer Valerie Plame. NEDRA PICKLER (AP)

Test images from NASA's Mars Reconnaissance Orbiter reveal pocked craters, carved gullies and wind-formed dunes on the Red Planet's southern hemisphere.

Orbiter Takes Aim At Mars' Surface

NASA publishes new images of planet's diverse topography

LOS ANGELES | Scientists have processed more than a dozen new photos taken by the Mars Reconnaissance Orbiter, which arrived at the Red Planet last month, including its first color image.

The crisp test images released Friday revealed pocked craters, carved gullies and wind-formed dunes in Mars' southern hemisphere. The diverse geologic features show the importance of water, wind and meteor impacts in shaping the Martian surface, scientists said.

The orbiter, the most advanced spacecraft ever sent to another planet, reached Mars on March 10 and slipped into an elliptical orbit. Over the next six months, it will dip into the upper atmosphere to shrink its orbit, lowering itself to 158 miles above the surface.

Last month, the orbiter beamed back the first view of Mars from an altitude of 1,547 miles. Those first test images were meant to calibrate the high-resolution camera aboard the spacecraft. The latest images were taken at the same time, but scientists spent several weeks processing them.

The Reconnaissance Orbiter will begin collecting data in November, and scientists expect the resolution of those images to be nine times higher.

The $720 million mission is managed by NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena. (AP)

Israel Aims to Cut All Ties to Hamas

Security panel rules out holding further peace talks with Abbas

JERUSALEM | Top Israeli security officials on Sunday recommended cutting all ties with the Hamas-led Palestinian government and ruled out peace talks with the Palestinian president, Mahmoud Abbas, as long as the Islamic militant group refuses to renounce violence.

The recommendation, which essentially approved what has been

Israeli policy since Hamas won elections in January, raised the likelihood that Israel will push forward with acting Prime Minister Ehud Olmert's plan to impose a border in the West Bank by 2010.

In a statement, the ministers said there will be "no personal boycott" of Abbas, but rejected any substantive negotiations with the Palestinian leader — a moderate who hopes to restart peace talks.

The Israeli Security Cabinet made the recommendation amid increasing Israeli military pressure on Hamas in response to Palestinian rocket fire into southern Israel.

Israeli forces pounded suspected launching sites in the northern Gaza Strip with artillery fire on Sunday, killing a Palestinian police officer and wounding 16 people. The Palestinian government called an emergency meeting to discuss the growing tensions.

Israel has refused to deal with Hamas, demanding that it halt violence, recognize Israel and accept previous interim agreements.

Nabil Abu Rdenah, a spokesman for the Palestinian president, said Israel should negotiate with Abbas, who is the head of the Palestine Liberation Organization, because Israel signed its agreements with the PLO. Abu Rdenah said Israel should not "look for any pretext for escaping from negotiating table."

Police Probe Deaths of 8 Canadians

TORONTO | Canadian police investigating the deaths of eight men found stuffed inside abandoned vehicles in a wooded field descended on a farmhouse a few miles down the road on Sunday.

Police refused to discuss what was happening beyond the roadblock they had set up around the farmhouse, about three miles from where the bodies were found inside four vehicles deserted in a farmer's field Saturday morning.

The eight victims knew each other and were all from the Toronto area, said police, who characterized the deaths as homicides but declined to release further details.

"We're in the middle of an active investigation right now," said Ontario police Const. Dennis Harwood.

Police found the bodies after a call from the property owner, who is not considered a suspect.

An aerial view late Saturday showed the vehicles parked within 200 yards of each other, with the bodies still inside. (AP)

Chavez Warns U.S. Diplomat

Venezuelan threatens to expel envoy over tangle with protesters

CARACAS, VENEZUELA | Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez said the U.S. ambassador was "provoking the Venezuelan people" and threatened Sunday to expel the American diplomat, whose convoy was chased by pro-government protesters on motorcycles.

Chavez condemned the crowd of protesters for pelting U.S. Ambassador William Brownfield's car with eggs and tomatoes, saying his government "rejects any kind of aggression."

But he suggested Brownfield, who was returning from a visit to a ballpark in Caracas' poor Coche neighborhood, a Chavez stronghold, sought a confrontation by failing to advise authorities adequately of his travel plans.

"I'm going to throw you out of Venezuela if you continue provoking the Venezuelan people," Chavez said in a nationally televised speech addressed to Brownfield.

Chavez's incendiary comments came after Washington warned of "severe diplomatic consequence" if a similar incident repeats itself.

Iraqi Shiites Meet On Disputed PM

Egypt's Mubarak asserts that civil war has 'almost started'

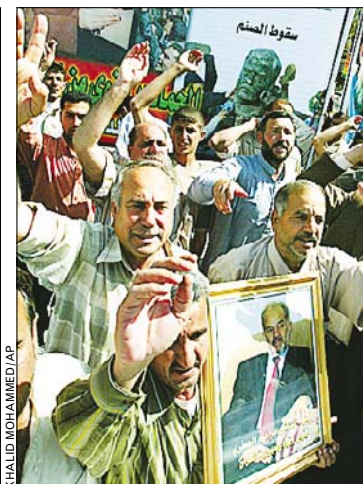

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Shiite lawmakers met on Sunday, the third anniversary of the fall of Baghdad to U.S. forces, in the first formal step to break the deadlock over Sunni and Kurdish opposition to their choice for a prime minister to head the next government.

But the meeting, held at the insistence of the Shiites' top clerical leadership, failed to produce any breakthroughs, as Prime Minister Ibrahim al-Jaafari's key allies stuck by their support for him, according to Shiite officials.

At least 15 people were killed in violence Sunday, including eight suspected insurgents shot by U.S. soldiers in a pre-dawn raid north of the capital.

Representatives of the seven factions within the United Iraqi Alliance made no final decisions during the Sunday meeting but agreed to form a three-member committee to discuss the crisis with Sunni Arab and Kurdish parties that have opposed al-Jaafari.

Meanwhile, in Cairo, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak angered

Iraqis rally in support of Prime Minister Ibrahim al-Jaafari in Baghdad Sunday.

Iraqi leaders on Sunday by saying Shiites there and across the Middle East are more loyal to Iran than to their own countries in a startlingly frank warning of possible civil war in Iraq.

In an interview broadcast Saturday by Al-Arabia television, Mubarak said, "Definitely Iran has influence on Shiites. Shiites are 65 percent of the Iraqis ... Most of the Shiites are loyal to Iran, and not to the countries they are living in."

He also said that civil war "has almost started" in Iraq.

UNDRESSED: Creditors told a crowd of Irish brides Friday they won't be getting their wedding dresses or their money back because of a dress-maker's surprise bankruptcy. More than 180 women planning their weddings were jilted at a shop in Cork that shut without warning March 23 — with an order book for prepaid dresses costing from $2,500 to $8,500 each. (AP)

'Some Progress' Made in New Talks on Darfur

ABUJA, NIGERIA | African leaders emerged from their first attempt at brokering peace in Sudan's Darfur region without a major development Sunday, though Sudan's lead negotiator said the groups made "some progress."

Dennis Sassou-Nguesso, Congo's president and current head of the 53-nation African Union, had teamed up with Nigerian President Olusegun Obasanjo to try to push the talks toward a resolution.

The negotiations aim to end more than three years of a civil war that has left more than 180,000 people dead and driven millions more from their homes.

The leader of the Sudanese negotiating team, Majzoub al Khalifa, said they made "some progress" on the key issues of how to share wealth and power and arrange security. (AP)

Police confront opposition party supporters during a rally protesting the rule of King Gyanendra in Katmandu, Nepal, Sunday.

Protests Escalate in Nepal

Violence continues as protesters defy curfew to demand democracy

KATMANDU, NEPAL | The crisis in this Himalayan nation deepened Sunday as angry crowds demanding the restoration of democracy took to the streets across Nepal in defiance of a daytime curfew, throwing stones at security forces and burning government offices.

With King Gyanendra and his swelling opposition both refusing to back down, the situation appeared to be reaching its most volatile point since he seized absolute power more than a year ago. The well-armed communist insurgency has allied itself with the political opposition, which vowed Sunday to continue demonstrations indefinitely.

Security forces have killed three protesters, including one in Sunday's gunfire, and thrown more than 800 in jail during four days of demonstrations that, for the first time, brought thousands of business people into the streets alongside students and political activists.

The protests, part of a four-day nationwide strike, were to end Sunday; instead the king's opponents announced that they would continue, with no end in sight.

The demonstrations will be "long-drawn. I can't say how this will end," said Ram Sharan Mahat of the country's largest party, the Nepali Congress.

Saturday was the 16th anniversary of the introduction of democracy in Nepal, which came about after dozens of pro-democracy demonstrators were shot by police, prompting a surge of anti-royal sentiment and forcing the late King Birendra to yield much of his authority.

Gyanendra abruptly ended the democratic experiment last year when he reclaimed absolute power from other parts of the government, arguing he needed to bring order to a chaotic and corrupt political scene and end a deadly communist insurgency. NEELISH MISRA (AP)

At Least 29 Die in Pakistan Stampede

KARACHI, PAKISTAN | A stampede killed at least 29 women and children and injured more than 70 others in this southern Pakistani port city Sunday as thousands filed out of a religious seminar to mark the birth of Islam's Prophet Muhammad, police and doctors said.

The stampede occurred outside the Sunni Muslim Faizan-e-Medina center in downtown Karachi as the crowd left after listening to clerics deliver sermons on the life of the 7th Century prophet whose birthday is celebrated Tuesday, said Hanees Billu, a spokesman for the center.

Witnesses said the fatal crush happened inside the compound of the center after a woman bent down to help a young girl who had fallen, causing other people behind to trip over her.

Doctors said most of the deaths were caused by internal injuries and suffocation, while more than 40 of those injured were in "very serious conditions," said Ali Azmat Abdi of the Liaquat National Hospital. (AP)

What is Christian Science and How Does It Heal?

A free Christian Science lecture by

at Fifth Church of Christ, Scientist

1238 31st Street, NW, Washington DC

(less than a block north of 31st and M Streets in Georgetown)

Monday, April 10 at 7:30 pm

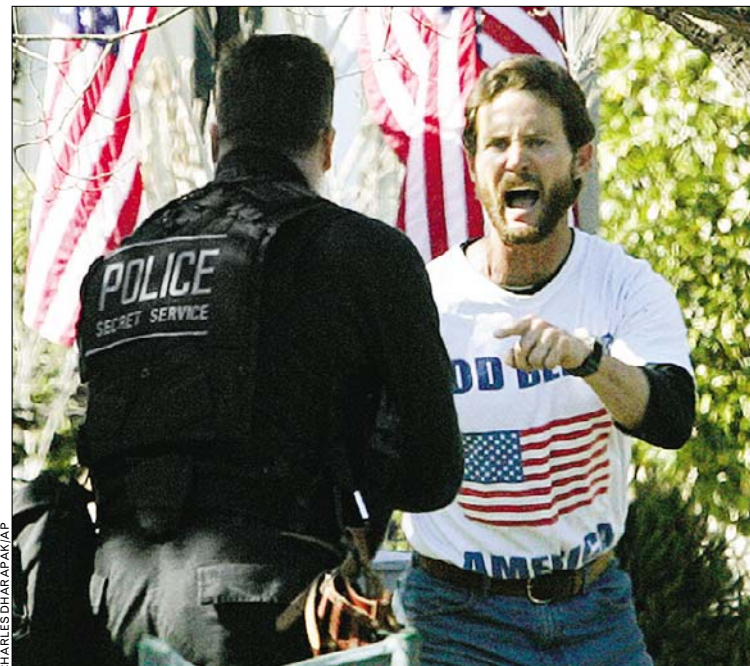

"On nearly every front we are greeted with tremendous technological and scientific progress which gives men and women increasing dominion over time and space - over limitations of matter. Isn't there a similar need for advances in the healing arts?" asks Martha Moffett.

"The power of the Christ, as understood in Christian Science:

- Brings just such an advance to healing;
- Teaches us how to heal as Christ Jesus did;
- Restores men and women physically, morally, and spiritually;
- Brings comfort, hope, and redemption to mankind."

Martha Moffett has devoted her career to solving problems through the application of law, both human and divine. She earned her undergraduate degree at Smith College and a law degree from Boston University and became a trial lawyer with the US Department of Justice. She also served as the Jerusalem Staff Attorney for the Lawyers Committee for Human Rights, and practiced law with a large Washington, DC law firm.

Throughout this time, she was developing a deeper interest in the laws of God that Christ Jesus applied with such consistent healing results. In 1994, she left her law practice to devote herself to the full-time public practice of this law through Christian Science healing. Martha is a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship.

An intruder on the White House lawn Sunday shouts at Secret Service Emergency Response members as they approach. He was taken into custody.

Man Intrudes at The White House

Shouting trespasser jumps fence while president is at home

WASHINGTON | A screaming intruder made his way onto the front lawn of the White House on Sunday while President Bush was at home.

The bearded man, wearing blue jeans and a white T-shirt that said "God Bless America," jumped the fence and ran across the north lawn while repeatedly yelling, "I am a victim of terrorism!"

Members of the Secret Service emergency response team, including one restraining a barking dog, chased the man with their guns drawn and surrounded him near a row of cameras kept there for television stand-ups. The man told officers he wasn't afraid of them.

The Secret Service said the man, Brian Lee Patterson, has been caught trying to get onto the White House grounds at least three times before. (AP)

Police Plan to Use Cameras To Monitor Crowds at Rally

With massive crowds expected tomorrow on the National Mall, D.C. Police will be keeping a close watch. The department said that at about 1 p.m. tomorrow it will turn on its network of 19 closed-circuit television cameras to look for any suspicious activity in the area. Police said they plan to turn the cameras off after the event is over. Elsewhere in Washington, police say a march is being planned by one group down 16th street in Northwest to the National Mall. That will cause several street closures in that area. (AP)

Veterinarian Says Attacked Bald Eagle Recovering Well

"Martha," the bald eagle recently attacked by another eagle near the Woodrow Wilson Bridge, is starting to feel better. Veterinarian Erica Miller said Sunday that Martha is "healing up quite nicely" at a hospital in Delaware following Wednesday's bloody attack. Martha is said to be a bit more alert and her chances of escaping a dangerous infection are "really good." Meanwhile, Martha's mate, 'George' appears to have been feeding a chick in the nest. (AP)

100K Could Show at Rally

Turnout expected to be high on the Mall in support of legislation

WASHINGTON | If it's anything like Sunday's immigration rallies being held across the country, there should be quite a turnout tomorrow on the National Mall.

Crowds of tens of thousands in Dallas were stretched for blocks in the streets of that city — almost all of them wearing white shirts as a symbol of peace.

About 100,000 people are expected to show up Monday in the District to rally support for immigration legislation that would create a path for citizenship for illegal immigrants.

Last week, there appeared to be a breakthrough in Congress, but a Senate compromise fell apart when the bill didn't get enough support in a test vote.

Work on immigration legislation is expected to resume after Congress returns from a recess. (AP)

Williams Aims to Overturn Year-Long Drug Suspension

Ricky Williams will meet with league officials Monday seeking to overturn a drug suspension that could cost him the entire 2006 season. League officials will not confirm drug suspensions under league policy that maintains confidentiality for positive tests. But Williams' agent, Leigh Steinberg, said last week that the hearing will take place at the NFL offices in New York. (AP)

U.S. Advance in Davis Cup

Andy Roddick played "closer" again for the United States, beating Chile's Fernando Gonzalez on Sunday to clinch the Davis Cup quarterfinal. The U.S. team next faces Russia, which defeated France. The Russians will be the home team for the semifinal. Roddick, wrapping up a Davis Cup round for the seventh time, defeated Gonzalez 4-6, 7-5, 6-3, 6-2 to give the United States an insurmountable 3-1 lead over Chile. (AP)

Rookie's Condition Improves After Weekend Shooting

The condition of Nuggets rookie Julius Hodge was upgraded to good Sunday, a day after someone fired shots into his car on a highway and wounded him in the legs. Coach George Karl said Hodge was hit three times. (AP)

Once Again, Mickelson Is Masterful

Lefty runs away with second green jacket with two-shot victory

GOLF | Phil Mickelson is a Masters champion again, and now he's making it look easy.

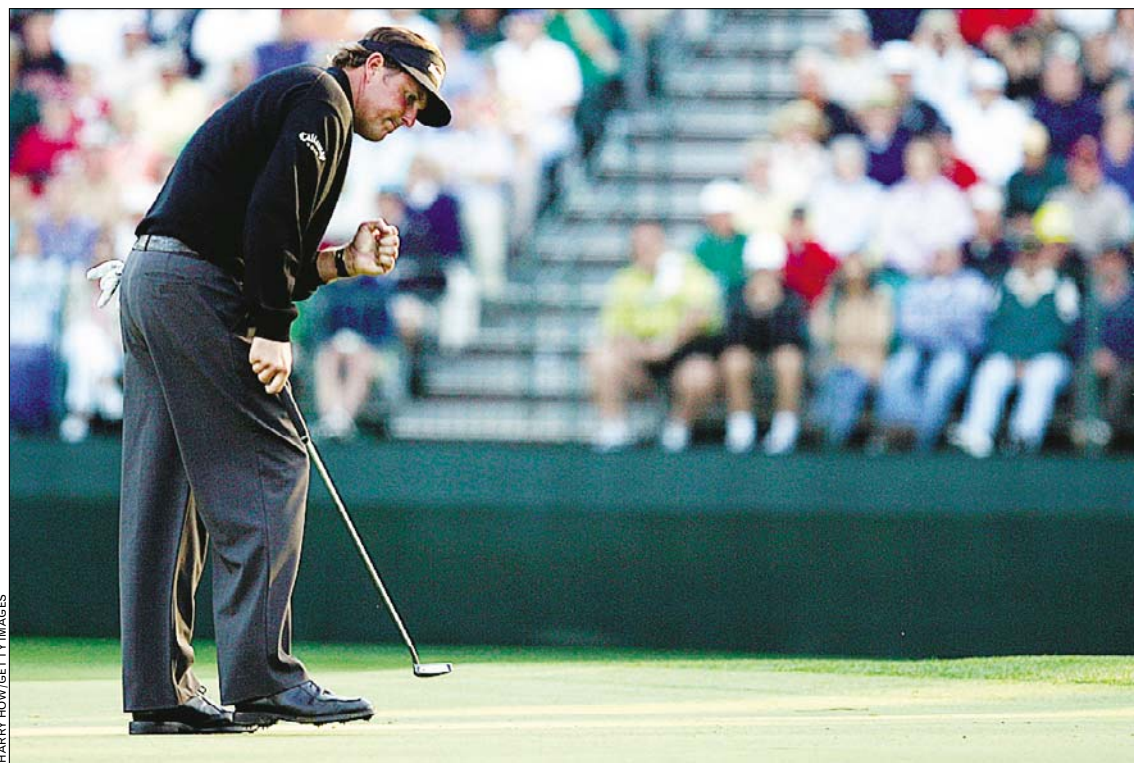

Once known as a lovable loser who went a dozen years and 42 majors before figuring out how to win golf's biggest events, Mickelson captured his second straight major on Sunday at Augusta National without needing a nail-biting finish. He closed with a 3-under 69 for a two-shot victory over Tim Clark, and his second green jacket in three years.

The only surprise was the way he won.

There were no thrills for Phil, rather calculated shots that forced Fred Couples, Tiger Woods and Vijay Singh to try to catch him. Instead, they stumbled with three-putts and a litany of other mistakes that allowed Mickelson to stroll up the 18th fairway with no worries.

He won his first major at Augusta two years ago with an 18-foot birdie putt on the final hole. He added the U.S. PGA Championship last year at Baltusrol with a flop shot to 2 feet for another decisive birdie on the final hole.

His only bogey on a breezy

MAJOR PHIL: Mickelson celebrates sinking a putt at the Masters, which he won Sunday for his second straight major title.

afternoon at Augusta National came when it no longer mattered. He missed the 18th green to the left, chipped to 20 feet and settled for two putts.

He didn't leap with arms thrust into the air, as he did two years ago. Mickelson simply smiled and walked off the green and into the arms of his wife and children.

He finished at 7-under 281 and earned $1.26 million, putting him atop the U.S. PGA Tour money list. The victory also moved him up to No. 2 in the world ranking behind Woods.

Mickelson emerged as a major threat to Woods' pursuit of Jack Nicklaus' record 18 victories in Grand Slam events. This was the third straight year Mickelson has won a major — Woods is the only other player to have done that in the last 20 years. Only five others have won majors in three straight seasons since the Masters began in 1934. DOUG FERGUSON (AP)

Kahne Wins From the Pole in Texas

AUTO RACING | Kasey Kahne became the 11th different winner in as many Nextel Cup races held at Texas Motor Speedway, yet he still managed to score a first here — by doing it from the pole.

Kahne sped way from the field after the final restart with 17 laps to go for his second victory this season, by 5.2 seconds over Matt Kenseth. He won in the same No. 9 Evernham Dodge from the pole in Atlanta last month.

After taking the lead from Tony Stewart with 27 laps to go, Kahne built a 1.4-second cushion over Stewart and Kenseth before a caution flag for debris on the track. All three cars took four tires on the pit stop and came out in the same order they went in.

Kasey Kahne fires blanks out of a pair of revolvers in victory lane on Sunday.

It took Kahne a couple of laps after the restart to finally clear the lapped car of Robby Gordon. Once he did, he cruised to the checkered flag at the Samsung/RadioShack 500. STEPHEN HAWKINS (AP)

Lawyer: Photos Will Clear Duke Players

Exotic dancer said to be injured and 'very impaired' before party

DURHAM, N.C. | Time-stamped photographs will show an exotic dancer was already injured and "very impaired" when she arrived at a party where she claims she was raped by members of Duke University's men's lacrosse team, an attorney for one of the players said Sunday.

"All of these statements you've heard ... about this brutal assault, rape, kidnapping and robbery which occurred, I believe that the public will soon be able to learn the truth, and that these allegations are totally false and without merit," said Durham attorney Bill Thomas.

Thomas declined to identify the player he represents and said he would not release the photos, taken by at least two cameras, until pending DNA tests are completed.

The allegations have led to the resignation of coach Mike Pressler, the cancellation of the lacrosse season and the suspension of one player from school. SAMUEL SPIES (AP)

Wizards Limp to Playoffs

Washington is banged up as it tries to secure 5th seed in the East

WIZARDS | Gilbert Arenas has an aching back. So does Etan Thomas. Caron Butler's problem is the right thumb, while Antonio Daniels has the telltale athletic tape around the left wrist.

Just when the fifth-place Washington Wizards (39-37) need to be securing their playoff seed and rounding into form for the postseason, the roll call of healthy bodies is looking awfully thin. "We're getting banged up at the worst time," Arenas said.

Butler (sprained thumb) and Daniels (sprained wrist) missed Friday's loss at Atlanta. Butler and Thomas (lower back pain) sat out Saturday's home loss to Miami. Arenas sprained a muscle in his lower back in an awkward landing after a layup against the Heat, but the team's best player soldiered on and scored 71 points combined in the back-to-back games.

"It's in a lot of pain. It's throbbing right now," Arenas said. "I can't bend over. But you go through the season, you're going to get injured. You're going to play with pain."

Arenas said he hoped a day of rest and treatment Sunday would get him to "80 percent" before the next game, Monday night at Philadelphia. He even dropped a mini-bombshell, revealing that he has played the last three years with chronic turf toe because he keeps putting off the surgery.

Any thought of taking a game off this week, to help get healthy for the playoffs? "Until we can seal that 5 spot? Nope," Arenas said. "I've just got to keep going full throttle until we can seal 5." JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Rapid & Sustained Improvement in Depressive Symptoms Research

The Mood & Anxiety Disorders Program at NIMH is conducting research on depression and rapid improvement of symptoms. Researchers hope to improve depression symptoms within 24 hours, and continue the improvement using medications. NIMH is seeking people with depression (unipolar or bipolar) who are:

- Free of other serious medical conditions
- Between the ages of 18-60
- Willing to participate in a minimum of a 12-day inpatient stay to participate in inpatient studies at the NIH Clinical Center in Bethesda, Md.

TRIPLE DELIGHT: Colorado Rockies leadoff hitter Cory Sullivan tied a major league record on Sunday by hitting two triples in the same inning. It was the 11th time a big leaguer hit two triples in an inning, and the first since Gil Coan of the Washington Senators on April 21, 1951.

Tim Wakefield's knuckleball was too much for Baltimore's hitters Sunday.

O's Strike Out Facing Red Sox

ORIOLES | Tim Wakefield got his knuckleball to flutter at just the right time against the overeager Baltimore Orioles, who flailed away with little success when it mattered most.

Wakefield pitched six perilous innings without allowing an earned run, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 4-1 victory Sunday and a three-game sweep. Adam Stern drove in two runs for the Red Sox, whose 5-1 start is their best since 1999. Boston outscored Baltimore 20-10 in the series and has won eight straight against the Orioles dating to September.

Wakefield (1-1) retired the side in order only once. He twice worked out of bases-loaded jams and stranded 10 runners before leaving with a 4-1 lead. "He's tough when he's got that thing moving," Orioles manager Sam Perlozzo said of Wakefield and his knuckleball. (AP)

BY THE NUMBERS: Since 1999, the Boston Red Sox are 44-18 when facing the Baltimore Orioles at Camden Yards. Boston swept this week's series. (AP)

Nats Succumb to Pettitte, Astros

Soriano, Byrd go deep but Drese struggles in 7-3 defeat to Houston

NATIONALS | Andy Pettitte allowed three runs in 6 1/3 solid innings and Adam Everett had three RBIs to lead the Houston Astros to a 7-3 win over the Washington Nationals on Sunday.

Pettitte (1-1) rebounded from his 10-run, 13-hit first start to allow seven hits and strike out four and help Houston win two of the first three games in the series. He also had an RBI-single and scored a run for Houston.

Pettitte gave up a home run to leadoff batter Marlon Byrd in the first and a two-run shot to Alfonso Soriano in the sixth. Pettitte has allowed five home runs this season after only allowing 17 in 2005.

Brad Lidge struck out three in a scoreless ninth, pitching around a double by pinch-hitter Daryle Ward and a one-out single to Royce Clayton.

LONG BALL: Alfonso Soriano hit his second home run as a Washington National in the sixth inning of a 7-3 loss to Houston. The teams play again Monday afternoon.

Everett had an RBI grounder off starter Ryan Drese (0-1) in the fourth to make 4-1, and added a two-run single off Joey Eischen in the fifth.

Pettitte got his eighth career RBI when he singled on a full count to score Everett in the third. Everett had reached on an error when short-stop Royce Clayton overthrew first base.

Morgan Ensberg hit a double to left field that scored Pettitte and Willy Taveras after reluctant outfielder Soriano had to run back to get the ball after failing to scoop it up the first time.

Chris Burke added a solo home run for Houston in the eighth.

Drese lasted just four innings, allowing five hits and one earned run with three strikeouts in his first action since shoulder surgery in September. He missed the last 42 games of 2005 with the injury and didn't pitch in a game in spring training, but he threw 81 pitches Sunday. KRISTIE RIEKEN (AP)

MARYMOUNT UNIVERSITY

cordially invites HR professionals and those who are interested in human resources to a symposium

International Human Resources

Wednesday, April 12 • 7 p.m.

Marymount University Ballston Center, 1000 North Glebe Road, Arlington

Dr. Pramilo Rao, MU assistant professor of Human Resources, will discuss how the field of human resources has evolved in responses to globalization. As US firms have established overseas operations and foreign companies have become a greater presence in the United States, many HR issues – managerial, technical, and cultural – have emerged.

- How do monetary exchange rates impact salaries?
- How do you prepare an employee culturally for work in another country?
- What incentives encourage an employee to want an overseas assignment?

Join other professionals involved in international HR issues for this timely event.

The discussion will be followed by a brief presentation on Marymount's M.A. and certificate programs in Human Resource Management.

Fans Mob Italian Club For Losing

SOCCER | A group of Inter Milan fans, angered by the team's unexpected elimination from the Champions League, attacked the players when they returned from an Italian league victory.

Fans at Malpensa airport shouted insults as the players arrived overnight Sunday, police said. In a parking lot outside the terminal, some masked fans turned violent, leaving midfielder Cristiano Zanetti with a bruise on his head. Two police officers were injured when they tried to defend the Inter players. Police officials said they were investigating.

Inter won 2-1 at Ascoli Saturday to keep alive its hopes of clinching second place in Serie A and automatic qualification for next season's Champions League. Players already received a rough welcome by fans after Tuesday's loss in the Champions quarterfinals by Villarreal. (AP)

Flaming Lips On Fire

Pop eccentrics abandon optimism for outraged protest

POLITICIZED | Make no mistake about it, Flaming Lips frontman Wayne Coyne is angry.

If the band's last full-length for Warner Bros., 2002's "Yoshimi Battles the Pink Robots," cloaked its emotions with songs about Japanese superheroes and true-to-life androids, the new "At War With the Mystics" finds the Flaming Lips putting a greater focus on the here and now.

"You think you're radical, but you're not so radical," Coyne sings in the album's "Free Radicals." "In fact, you're fanatical."

The Flaming Lips have never sounded so funky. But more surprising is the sarcasm in Coyne's voice. Perhaps beginning with 1999's "The Soft Bulletin," the Flaming Lips have earned a reputation as eternal optimists, dressing up moments of sadness with grand orchestrations, as evidenced on "Waiting for Superman" and the "Yoshimi" single "Do You Realize?"

Fans are getting a glimpse of another side of Coyne.

"This wasn't by our intention, but we've been given this sort of throne of optimism and enthusiasm," Coyne said. "I didn't want people to think we could just ignore everything else and sing about how wonderful the world is when we've got [expletive] like George W. Bush."

SISTERS OF NO MERCY: Wayne Coyne, right, is speaking up, but he leads his band in goofily celebratory performances.

There are a handful of protest songs, including the bouncy "Haven't Got a Clue" and the space-rock anthem "The W.A.N.D." Yet the Flaming Lips seem incapable of going completely negative, and there are moments of beauty, notably the swirling mix of guitars, keyboards and flutes on "Pompeii Am Gotterdammerung."

"You can't sit there and say, 'We'll just sing about the mystical, magical nature of love and existence,'" said Coyne. "We don't expect to change the war. I have no illusions that rock music has ever changed anything, but if nothing else, this is like praying. We sing it to the darkness, and it makes us feel better."

The Flaming Lips tour relentlessly and have a reputation for boisterous live shows. Coyne is wont to come onstage in a giant ball, and then there is an assortment of puppets, fake blood, party toys, large balloons and full-body animal costumes.

The band's sound may change, but Coyne said the live shows will continue to be one massive celebration. "I would never want people to think we'd abandon the 'parade of freaks' thing that we do."

Smarter than the average pop girl, Pink changes her colors once again.

Anything but Stupid

Pink turns her keen eye on pop tarts, politics and pride

MUSIC | So many shades of Pink to absorb on her new album "I'm Not Dead" (Arista). There's protest singer Pink. Bluesy Pink. Balladeer Pink. Rocker Pink. And, of course, smarter-than-the-average-pop-star pop star Pink.

As she has in the past, Pink shows off that incarnation remarkably well on the lead-off single, "Stupid Girls," where she lampoons celebrities such as Paris Hilton and Lindsay Lohan.

She follows it up with the protest folk of "Dear Mr. President," where, with the Indigo Girls' help, she earnestly asks the president, "How can you say no child is left behind? We're not dumb and we're not blind/They're all sitting in your cells while you pave the road to hell."

Equally impressive is the mournful "I Got Money Now," where she declares, "You don't have to like me anymore, I got money now," though she doesn't believe it.

Though she does a bit of recycling — "Who Knew" is essentially her take on Kelly Clarkson's "Since U Been Gone" and, musically, "Leave Me Alone (I'm Lonely)" owes a lot to the Killers' "Mr. Brightside" — Pink continues to stretch the boundaries of what people can expect from her and from their pop stars.

Talk About Celebrity

Stepping out with Perez Hilton, 'gossip gangstar,' is a treat

THE DIRT | He's a Hollywood gossipmonger's dream and a troubled celebrity's nightmare. He's like US Weekly, the Star, the Enquirer and Life & Style all rolled into one sweet yet snarky, sagacious yet salacious gay man. Mario Lavandeira, better known as Perez Hilton, is so popular he is becoming a celebrity in his own right.

The regular features on Perez's photo-illustrated Web site include celebrity gossip, of course, but also "Separated at Birth" photos (a recent pairing: the old Star Jones and the new porky Britney Spears); "Personally Perez," about his celebrity interactions and party-hopping; animated shorts (including the hilarious "Dirty Colin," a riff on the infamous Colin Farrell sex tape); and "Wacky, Tacky and True."

Perez started his Web site in 2004 as pagesixsixsix.com and debuted perezhilton.com in May 2005. Now he's on E! News, has a reality show in development called "Gossip Queen" and a book deal.

"I also actively and aggressively try to break stories on a daily basis," he said, relying on contacts including friends in the industry and at celebrity magazines, restaurant and shop workers, publicists and celebrities themselves.

"Do you want to hear some gossip?" Perez, 28, asks in a conspiratorial stage whisper as we walk down Robertson Boulevard one recent Saturday. "Allegedly ... " It was a juicy tidbit about Tom Cruise and, sorry, it was off the record.

One day out with the Miami-born Cuban-American princess offered a peek into Perez's world. He needed to buy two birthday presents, so he headed for the trendy Kitson, with its velvet-roped line of potential shoppers outside.

Inside, Perez ran into a friend from People magazine and warmed up with a query about what to get his friends. Then, he nonchalantly queried: "Is Britney pregnant again? Tell me."

The People person said she didn't think so. "She is so pregnant," said Perez after the woman walked away.

It's not easy being a gossip gangstar, but somebody's got to do it. SAMANTHA BONAR (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Reach out and touch Kirk and the crew with interactive 'Star Trek'

TECH | We know 'em all by heart by now. From "He's dead, Jim" to "Highly illogical" to every pregnant ... pause ... in William Shatner's delivery, the original "Star Trek" is been-there-done-that in the life of even the most ardent Trekker. What could possibly beam us into another cable run of '60s episodes we already own pristine on DVD?

Seeing ourselves on screen, maybe? Tonight's night's interactive premiere of "Star Trek 2.0" on SET YOUR TV ON STUNNED: Perhaps snarking at the show is the final frontier.

G4 starts by shrinking the episode action into a half-size center box, which is then surrounded by ticker-type dealing and IM give-and-take. It's expressly designed for fans who think if they hear Scotty whine "I cannute dooit, Captinn!" one more time, their heads will explode.

Now you can explode Scotty's worth instead, by bidding down his stock in the updated Spock Market listings. Had enough of Dr. McCoy's racist remarks about Vulcans? Down with MDM, then. When those Federation suits try to sink Kirk's renegade tactics, you can sink FED instead.

Watch "Star Trek 2.0" while you're logged on at www.g4tv.com/trek2.0 (registration required), and all those years of previous viewing pay off. DIANE WERTS (NEWSDAY)

Personal Tech

About 1 million of Hotmail's 230 million users are participating in a "beta" test of Microsoft's redesign of the program, formally known as Windows Live Mail.

Hotmail's Makeover

Redesigned 'Kahuna' Live Mail falling short in initial user testing

TECH TEST | I signed up for my first Hotmail account in 1996 when a tech-savvy friend told me it would be part of the wave of the future.

"Imagine it, this e-mail address travels with you," he said. I quickly signed up and have been hooked ever since.

But somewhere along the line, it seemed as if Microsoft Corp. just stopped caring about the free Web-based e-mail service it bought in 1997. The once-groundbreaking Hotmail quickly became a dinosaur to feature-rich rivals from Yahoo Inc., Google Inc. and AOL.

Enter Microsoft's Hotmail overhaul — code-named "Kahuna," so-named to reflect what the company considers a big wave of innovation. For now, though, Kahuna falls short.

About 1 million of Hotmail's 230 million active users are now using a "beta" test of Kahuna, formally known as Windows Live Mail. The product ties into the rollout of Microsoft's Live brand, which will one day integrate multiple pieces of software in one bundle.

With the facelift, Hotmail looks much more like Microsoft's Outlook desktop software than a traditional Web product.

One of Live Mail's strongest features is its alert for potential "phishing" attacks. The "infobar" appears red when a message is potential spam or a phishing scheme and green when it comes from someone already in your contact list.

All really are powerful features — but truly innovative a few years ago. I would have liked to see some true breakthroughs that would make my friends using other free mail services turn green with envy.

Live Mail doesn't automatically check for new messages like its rivals, nor does it work in competing browsers — just Microsoft's own Internet Explorer. This is expected to change down the pike.

While Microsoft irons out the kinks in Live Mail, users who like the traditional Hotmail view would be well advised to stick with it for the time being. JOE BEL BRUNO (AP)

— Thom, Physical Therapist

Take kids from being patients...to being home

Everyone deserves a highlight in their day. Our highlights are different at The HSC Pediatric Center. They may involve being ambushed by a squirt gun toting five-year-old. That's remarkable. Because it demonstrates that weeks of hand therapy finally paid off in a major way...and that you are one step closer to giving your young patient the most precious gift of all: the ability to return home. That's what we are all about, as the Washington, DC area's only premier provider of rehabilitative and transitional care. It is care that changes kids, families, and caregivers.

The old guard of film is abandoning its once-flourishing field

They are some of the most legendary names in photography. Minolta scored the world's first successful auto-focus, single-lens reflex camera. Fuji invented 1600-speed film, once the industry's fastest. Nikon's fabled F-series made the 35mm camera the picture-taking workhorse for the last half-century.

Now the companies share a more dubious distinction: abandoning part of the business that made them famous.

Camera makers have battled to adapt to the digital revolution for the past 10 years, but recent retreats by leading brands underline how the industry has turned upside-down. With the market poised to plateau, more players are chasing fewer opportunities and the old guard is losing out.

"It's inevitable that many of the camera manufacturers in the market today will be either bought up or go out of business," said Ed Lee, an analyst with InfoTrends Inc.

More than 75 percent of all cameras sold today are digital, and digital images are expected to account for 90 percent of all professionally taken photos by 2010, compared with 70 percent now.

Camera buffs were stunned in January when Konica Minolta Holdings Inc., which traces its roots to 1873, said it was quitting the camera business altogether and selling its digital assets to Sony Corp.

Nikon Corp. said the same month it would stop making seven of its nine film cameras and concentrate on digital models.

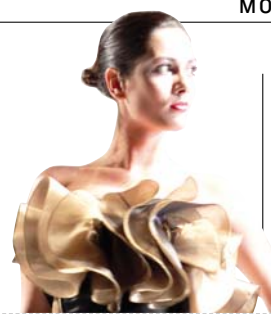

Fuji Photo Film Co., which plans to cut 5,000 jobs, changed directions last month announcing it would spend nearly $8.5 million to diversify into pharmaceuticals.

Kodak, which is cutting up to 25,000 jobs, is the third-biggest digital camera maker worldwide, behind Sony. But Kodak was slow to shift its focus to digital.

Many of the big names in photography were once startups in their own right as they rushed to market in the 1950s with the advent of 35mm cameras, undercutting and stealing market share from European makers.

Despite the digital push, amateurs and artists who have shot on film since they first picked up cameras may never completely turn their backs on it, insisting that film still has the edge in lifelike depth, better resolution and more natural contrast.

Even today, film is still favored in education, portraiture, fine art and even in fashion, where many photographers still shoot in film but scan the images into a computer to take advantage of digital manipulation.

"The fact is, people prefer film," said Steven Brierley, sales director at Ilford Photo of Britain. "The look and feel of it puts it on a different level from digital output."

Hideki Fujii, director of the Nippon Photography Institute, a Tokyo-based photo school, echoes the sentiment, even though his school has spent nearly $700,000 in the past five years to upgrade to digital computer labs. "I use both, but I can put my heart into film," Fujii said. "I don't think we'll ever see it totally disappear." HANS GREIMEL (AP)

Daytona Beach has succeeded in driving spring breakers away

Dana Wassum and Mary Jane Jackson brought their bikinis all the way from Maryland's Towson University to soak up spring-break sun in Daytona Beach, Fla. So far, they've been disappointed.

"I kind of thought it would be more crazy," the 21-year-old Wassum said. "Like wet T-shirt contests. We wanted to enter one but couldn't find any."

Three years after Daytona Beach stopped advertising aimed at pulling in the spring-break crowd, the number of students has dropped from 400,000 to a trickle.

"I kind of thought it would be more crazy. Like wet T-shirt contests. We wanted to enter one but couldn't find any."

DANA WASSUM
SPRING BREAKER

Daytona inherited the spring-break traffic in the 1980s from Fort Lauderdale, where years of trashed hotels, fights and fatal balcony accidents persuaded officials there to get out of the college tourism business. The mayor went on national television to tell students they were no longer welcome.

After an advertising push lured

them north, Daytona Beach was overwhelmed by raucous crowds and started to crack down on heavy partying in the 1990s. Bad behavior peaked again in 2002, with hoteliers complaining of heavy drinking and vandalism. Scores of high school girls were handcuffed and arrested for showing their breasts. Others drank until passing out in the street.

It has been steadily more sedate since. "When you do put controls on events and you're really clamping down on some of the excesses like alcohol consumption, I think the kids figure, 'Why worry about going somewhere and being arrested when I can go to the Caribbean or somewhere and not have to worry about those controls,'" said Tangela Boyd of the Daytona Beach Area Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Further draining the party pool are "alternative spring break" options, like volunteering on the Gulf Coast or building houses for the homeless. Spring break trips abroad, where alcohol consumption is easier for under-21 partiers, are also gaining in popularity.

Daytona and Fort Lauderdale aren't the first cities to decide the students were more trouble than they were worth. After Sonny Bono was elected mayor of Palm Springs, Calif., in 1988, he helped transform the resort town from a spring-break mecca by banning cruising and thong bikinis. TRAVIS REED (AP)

Do You Continue to Be Depressed?

The NIMH is conducting a study to test the effectiveness of AMPakine in major depression. This study examines a different mechanism of action from commonly used antidepressants. Our hope is to find new medications for individuals who have not responded to past treatment.

This is a 10-week outpatient and inpatient study of medication or placebo conducted at the NIH Clinical Center in Bethesda, Maryland.

Participants must:

- Be ages 21-55
- Be currently depressed
- Have taken an antidepressant that did not help

The study includes medical and psychiatric evaluations, and research medication at no cost. Transportation reimbursement provided.

FASHION WIRE DAILY

A SHOW FULL OF SURPRISES: Mexican designer Carlos Demichelis brought flair and elegance to an otherwise disappointing Mexican Fashion Week. His fuzzy coat is both posh and conservative, while burgandy tights and ankle boots a little more punk rock. His svelte evening gowns melded simplicity with decadence.

Southern Silhouettes

Fashion Week crosses borders

Fashion Week Mexico launched its second season on the rooftop of Camino Real Hotel in the heart of Mexico City's swanky Polanco district. While the sight of the bustling staff, eager socialites and swarming press members followed the formula of any given fashion week, the voluptuous runway models and flamboyant clothes seen so far make it clear that Mexico carries its own definition of style.

Most of the collections thus far failed to show more than one or two memorable looks, but local designer Carlo Demichelis easily outshined the rest of his fellow designers with a stellar collection that had the clean sophistication of Narciso Rodriguez and a kind of decadence rarely seen in American fashion.

The show began with a handful of conservative ensembles that included a cowl neck grey wool jacket and a traditional olive peacoat with strips of metallic black leather trimming. The feminine silhouette of a bold leather coat with chocolate leather shingles kept the avant-garde look clean and accessible while a form-fitting blazer worn over black riding pants gave audience members a glimpse of the designer's softer side.

A floor-skimming grey gown with all-over beaded embroidery and a fitted black dress with a gold chiffon tiered bust stole the show. The plunging back-side of the grey gown exposed enough skin to visually lift the heaviness of its beaded embellishments whereas the latter gown's simple black bodice tamed the explosion of gold chiffon detailing that beautifully framed the décolletage.

Demichelis' play with volume and texture, however, did not always make for great clothing. For example, the glittering sequins on a sheer black chiffon fish-tail top looked like it came straight out of a scene from the "Matrix" trilogy and a kimono-inspired eggplant shirt-dress looked sloppy and out of sync with the rest of the collection.

It also didn't help that many of the runway models didn't know how to work the runway, as more than a couple succumbed to falls or the loss of a shoe.

Clearly, the audience didn't seem to mind, as most everyone rose from their seats to give the designer a standing ovation at the end of the show. Still, Demichelis needs to work harder at focusing his collection and perfecting his runway presentation should he want to claim a spot in the global fashion market. This is especially true if he plans on ever showing in New York, Paris or Milan where unforgiving critiques dominate.

Lucky for Demichelis, there is no denying that this designer has the raw talent and local notoriety that is necessary to put him on the right track toward international success.

Dad Smells Like Cars!

Over 75 million fans watch the Daytona 500 each year, and we're willing to bet at least a couple of them smell pretty bad. DAYTONA 500 COLOGNE ($40, Sears and JC Penney) might help. The pleasant, spicy scent is something of a modern riff on Old Spice, with deep notes of sandalwood offset by what smells like a really good gin and tonic. While it's not revolutionary, it would make a nice gift for a dad who loves the smell of gasoline, but doesn't necessarily want to wear it on his skin.

But while the meals are not the most adventurous culinary journeys you'll ever take, the sensible, quick and easy-to-prepare recipes are viable solutions for when you're too tired or hungry to try anything fancy. Special kudos to the slow-cooker article, which eschewed the usual stews and roasts for recipes such as chicken curry soup and orange sesame ribs. K.P.K.

Judas Redux

Professor MARVIN MEYER, who is on the Codex Advisory Panel assembled by the National Geographic Society, discussed the Gospel of Judas. | washingtonpost.com

Does the entire content of the Gospel of Judas deal with the relationship between Jesus and Judas? How many pages in the complete volume?

The entire text of the Gospel of Judas occupies 26 pages of the book or Codex; that is pages 33 through 58. The relationship between Jesus and Judas is the key element in the Gospel of Judas. It is suggested in the gospel, in no uncertain terms, that Judas is the only one of the disciples who truly understands Jesus. The heart of the Gospel of Judas communicates a revelation or a teaching that Jesus offered to Judas about the nature of the world and the nature of God in the world. It is this teaching about cosmology that is the content of the knowledge that Judas must understand in order to become enlightened. He does understand it; he becomes transfigured or enlightened and he does exactly what Jesus asks him to do. He turns him into the authorities.

When and where will the English translation of the text be available?

It is available right now in the book titled "The Gospel of Judas," edited by Rodolphe Kasser, Marvin Meyer, myself and Gregor Wurst. And it should be at bookstores everywhere. The National Geographic Web site has the Coptic text and many other aids for reading and understanding the Gospel of Judas.

Who wrote the Gospel of Judas?

We do not know who wrote the Gospel of Judas, but one thing is very clear, it was not Judas. Rather it was some mid-second-century Christian who felt that he or she had a powerful understanding of the good news of Jesus and wanted to proclaim that vision of Jesus to other people.

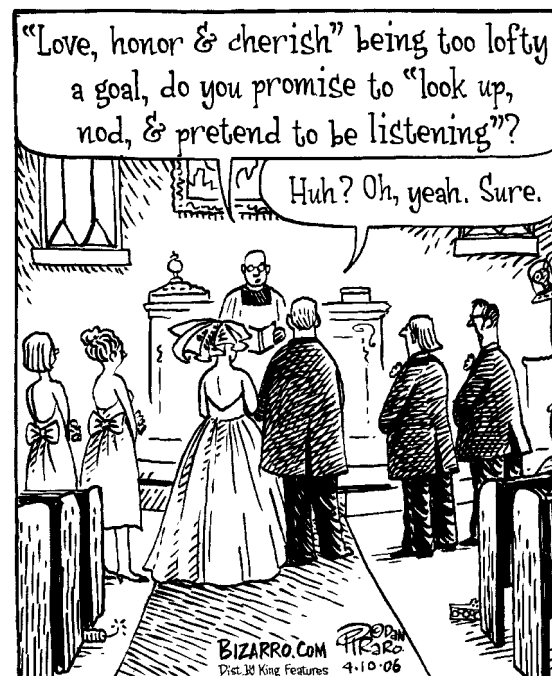

Why were the early church leaders so opposed to the Judas text and the idea that Jesus may have appointed Judas to turn him over to the authorities?

The Gospel of Judas not only has an unconventional view of the disciple Judas, it also is a mystical or Gnostic gospel that suggests that within every person there is a spark or light of the divine. God is within each human being. This mystical approach was viewed with suspicion by many people, in particular church leaders, and in addition to theological issues that they had with this sort of gospel, they were also concerned with the political implications. If readers of the Gospel of Judas and other similar mystical gospels take the message seriously, then they do not need to consult with any priest or bishop in order to find the way to God. They can find God by themselves because they are one with God. ... This sort of independence, if widespread, could leave them unemployed.

Who Needs Critics Anyway?

I'M WRITING IN REFERENCE to the article "No Critics Allowed" that appeared in Friday's edition of Express. I agree with the movie studios that refuse to let some of their films be screened in advance for critics.

I'm glad they aren't permitting their movies to be previewed. Smart people are not going to depend on what a critic writes about a movie anyway. They're going to see the movie for themselves.

Critics don't watch a movie in the same way the general audience does. I think critics should be fired and go out and get a real job.
